CommunitySecure Finds a Fiber-Optic Pathway for its Services

Cary, North Carolina (March 7, 2008) – Connexion Technologies announced today its commitment to deliver CommunitySecure's award-winning building security, concierge services and integrated communications solution over Connexion's advanced Fiber to the Premise (FTTP) network.

“Our technology integration strategy is to partner with best-of-breed solution providers. Connexion Technologies is the country's premier fiber-optic amenity company that delivers integrated services -- television, Internet, telephone, all at exceptional speeds,” said Greg Goldman, President of CommunitySecure. “With all the resources we now bring to the table, no luxury high rise condominium can be complete without the CommunitySecure solution.”

The partnership between Connexion Technologies and CommunitySecure provides developers the ability to seamlessly incorporate access control within properties while reducing the requirement for redundant infrastructures.

This is part of a program called Managed Convergence, which brings together an ecosystem of certified technology providers centered on Connexion Technologies' fiber-optic infrastructure for the purpose of delivering services as seamlessly and efficiently as possible. The collaboration with Millennium will allow ease of construction and operation along with reduced capital expenditures.

“Typically a program like this would not be practical as we would have to work with local and regional integrators, which is simply un-scalable and unmanageable for our national presence,” said Jason Scutt, Connexion Technologies' Vice President of Security. “The relationship with Millennium presents a unique opportunity for Connexion that will allow us to deploy standardized interface architecture.”
